IMPLICITNE (NE)MOĆI ARHITEKTURE

Kao osnovno polazište za sagledavanje radova na izložbi Transformacije: savremena umetnost u/o arhitekturi može poslužiti koncept trijalektike prostora, koji je 1974. uveo Anri Lefevr (Henri Lefebvre). Prema Lefevru, prostor ima aktivnu – operativnu ili instrumentalnu – ulogu, poput znanja ili akcije (1991: 11) i definisan je kroz odnos između fizičkog, mentalnog i društvenog prostora, to jest kroz odnos između viđenog, shvaćenog i doživljenog prostora (l'espace perçu – l'espace conçu – l'espace vécu). Iz toga sledi da prostor u velikoj meri utiče na naše društvene odnose i na naše aktivnosti, što je već velik broj istoričara i teoretičara arhitekture potvrdio analizirajući ulogu arhitekture i urbanizma u procesima stvaranja zajednica, ukladanja segregacije, omogućavanja dostupnosti javnog prostora deci i drugih formi društvenosti koje arhitektura može da potpomogne ili o(ne)mogući.

Imajući na umu da arhitektura ima moć da dizajnira društvene odnose, izložba, s jedne strane, predstavlja savremene umetničke prakse o arhitekturi, to jest radove koji referišu na arhitekturu i zelene javne površine kako bi se problematizovalo ono što one predstavljaju ili simbolišu. S druge strane, izložba prikazuje izbor instalacija koje su izvedene in situ, u okviru arhitektonskih zdanja izgrađenih u periodu modernizma. Obe vrste radova, menjanjem prostora ili simboličkim premeštanjem jednog prostora u drugi, ukazuju na načine na koje koristimo arhitekturu, na načine na koje bismo mogli da je koristimo, ali i na načine na koje ona utiče na naše aktivnosti i shvatanja. Kao rezultat toga, umetnost i arhitektura transformišu jedna drugu, ali i nas koji dolazimo u susret s njima.

Stagnacija i mobilnost

Arhitekturu shvatamo prvenstveno kao nešto statično, nešto što definiše naše kretanje i naše aktivnosti. Arhitektura se može posmatrati i iz urbanističke perspektive, to jest u stalnom rastu i menjanju usled izgradnje sve više komercijalnih zgrada i sve više višespratnica na mestu jednoporodičnih kuća. Ona tako postaje mašina za profit, mašina za stanovanje, mašina za učenje, produkciju, lečenje i sve drugo što nije uslovljeno samo lokacijama (udaljenost radnog mesta od kuće) već i kvalitetom prostora koji kao takav utiče na kvalitet našeg života i rada. Prostori bez električne energije, bez grejanja, bez dovoljnog vodovodnog i kanalizacionog kapaciteta, bez dobre ventilacije i dovoljno svetlosti nisu adekvatni za rad, hospitalizaci-ju, učenje, stanovanje, te je osnovna svrha arhitekture da obezbedi dobre uslove, što nadilazi njene estetske aspekte. Često se dešava da se nova vrsta estetike u arhitekturi upravo i rađa iz njene funkcionalnosti, kao što je to primer s modernističkim socijalizmom u arhitekturi.

Neadekvatnih građevina imamo na pretek, u vidu neodržavanih ruina koje potiču iz prošlosti, kao i u vidu novoizgrađenih zgrada koje nisu adekvatno priključene infrastrukturni ili koje nisu isplativa za održavanje (Kosec, 2013). Jedna od takvih ruina je motel u Trogiru koji je 1965. dizajnirao eminentni jugoslovenski i hrvatski arhitekt Ivan Vitić. Otvoren dan nakon otvaranja jadranske magistrale, motel sada iza sebe ima preko dve decenije funkcionalnog rada, a preko tri decenije je meta strategija propadanja – strateškog urušavanja nekadašnje društvene svojine, fabrika, zdravstva, javnog fonda, školstva, te i motela zarad veličine parcele koja je atraktivna za neku novu gradnju (Bodrožić i Šimpraga, 2014: 8). Prepoznajući značaj ovog motela za opus Ivana Vitića, ali i za istoriju jugoslovenske moderne arhitekture, grupa građana je 2013. godine pokrenula inicijativu koja je rezultirala time da motel bude upisan u registar nepokretnih kulturnih dobara.

Kako bi se promenila percepcija motela kao ruine bez struje i vode, zarasle u rastinje uz magistralu, građanska inicijativa je ubrzo uputila otvoreni poziv umetnicima da svojim intervencijama na kratko izmene stanje stagnacije u kojem se motel nalazi. U okviru te inicijative nastaje intervencija, a uporedno i video-rad, Ukradena budućnost / Stolen Future Neli Ružić, koji naslovom aludira na sistematsko uništavanje nasleđa socijalizma i sećanja na njega, propraćeno bogaćenjem pojedinaca na račun društvenog dobra, te stoga i na račun budućnosti cele zemlje koja je time ukradena. Za njenu svetlosnu instalaciju koja vraća nekadašnju život motelu, od posebnog je značaja odnos između viđenog, shvaćenog i doživljenog prostora, na koji upućuje Lefevr. Motel, koji sada ima preko pola veka, prešao je iz društvenog u privatno vlasništvo, iz ruine u kulturno dobro, iz zaraslog mesta nevidljivog novim generacijama u sublimirani arhitektonski kadar koji beleži protok vremena i poziva nas na planiranje za budućnost koja nam je oduzeta.

Motivi stagnacije i mesta, kao i načini na koje ih doživljavamo, od velike su važnosti i za radove Nadežde Kirćanski. Izašavši iz polja skulpture u prošireno polje instalacije i prostorno senzitivnih intervencija, Kirćanski je stvorila niz instalacija u kojima se fokusira na različite vrste stagniranja u mestu. U nekim radovima je to kulturološko percipiranje smrti, koje problematizuje različitim pristupima – od potapanja peškira u gips kako bi ih pretvorila u čvrsta mesta/objekte sećanja, do restauracije izmeštenih grobnih spomenika koji su vremenom postali građevinski materijal u izgradnji puteva. U tom kontekstu, arhitektura se u njenom stvaraštvu pojavljuje kao značajan semantički nivo. Godine 2018. započinje seriju instalacija pod nazivom Ništa spec., u okviru koje Galeriju Doma omladine Beograda pretvara u čekaonicu, korišćenjem projekcija bolničkog ambijenta, bojenjem zidova u nijansu zelene boje specifičnu za bolnice i unošenjem klupe i biljaka iz bolničke čekaonice. U okviru istog projekta, Galeriju Akademije lepih umetnosti u Sarbukenu (Hochschule der Bildenden Künste Saar) uz pomoć plovaka koji vise iznad publike pretvara u vodenu masu u kojoj se posetioci naizgled nalaze, izmeštajući na taj način arhitekturu na dno mora i postavljajući posetioce u bezizlaznu situaciju.

Na izložbi Transformacije: savremena umetnost u/o arhitekturi Kićanski učestvuje sa simboličnim konceptom autobusa koji nema ni početka ni kraja, to jest koji je zatvorena kružna struktura, poput zmije koja sama sebi jede rep. Ovaj autobus se pojavljuje kao simbolična modifikacija javnog prevoza, postajući znak koji se nastavlja na temu stagnacije i bezizlaznih situacija, uzrokovane nemogućim uslovima života. Iako autobus ima vrata, te se u njega može ući i može se izaći, on nikuda ne vodi, nego se samo kreće u krug, poput ringišpila koji ovoga puta ne donosi nimalo zabave. Odabirom motiva autobusa, neminovno se evociraju sve tegobe kretanja po bilo kom gradu koji ima autobuse kao vid javnog prevoza, tegobe zbog gužvi, zbog radova, zbog proredenog reda vožnje, a svojevremeno, kada je naše područje u pitanju, i zbog nedostatka benzina tokom sankcija devedesetih godina prošlog veka. Svođenjem vozila za kretanje od tačke A do tačke B na absurdni prevozni ringišpil kojem je uskraćena funkcija prevoznog sredstva, automatski se uskraćuje i pojma mesta, to jest mogućnost postojanja tačke A i tačke B. Stagnacija, to jest vožnja u krug, mučna kao tapkanje u mestu ili zabavna kao ringišpil, postaje time jedina realnost.

Umnožavanje i brisanje

Za savremenu umetničku praksu Ivana Šuletića karakteristično je prsvajanje i utapanje arhitektonskih crtačkih metoda u umetničke medije. Tako za rad Smrt svima (2014) koristi paus papir i tehniku precrtavanja, često u arhitekturi i generalno u ručnom kopiranju administrativnih dokumenata pre otkrića mehaničkih sredstava kopiranja, kako bi grafit s tom porukom preslikao s fudbalskog stadiona i izložio ga kao sliku realnosti u kojoj živimo. Za potrebe rada Trijumfalna kapija (2014) koristi metod preseka u prezentaciji arhitekture, kao i stvaranje replike, to jest makete u punoj razmeri prema originalnoj građevini. Pored toga što koristi arhitektonske metode, Šuletić takođe i zalaže umetničkim intervencijama u arhitektonski prostor ili ga koristi kao osnovni motiv u svojim radovima. Tako 2012. izvodi mural Zlatne poluge u Majdanpeku, gradu poznatom po nalazištu zlata, a 2017. godine započinje seriju slika i crteža na kojima su repetitivni arhitektonski motivi jedine teme i metode stvaranja umetničkih kompozicija.

Jednu od tih Cityscape serija čine crteži na izložbi Transformacije: savremena umetnost u/o arhitekturi. Arhitektura na njima nije samo motiv nego postaje i metod jer crteži preuzimaju neke tehnike crtanja u arhitekturi. Prikazujući serijalno multiplikovane motive stambenih blokova kako bi ukazao na serijalnu masovnu proizvodnju arhitekture, na njenu nekadašnju funkcionalnost koja se gomilanjem gubi, Šuletić ukazuje i na nekontrolisano metastaziranje urbanog tkiva koje jede sav prostor. Takva klonirana arhitektura, koja se poput ćelije umnožava deobom u svim pravcima, u svim delovima sveta, gubi na kvalitetu koji arhitektura treba da ima i gubi sve one funkcije koje njenim korisnicima omogućavaju niz najrazličitijih aktivnosti. Ona postaje svojevrsna struktura, mreža koja određuje sve ono što se više može upisati u nju – najrazličitije forme društvenosti, razvoja i napretka – jer je postala toliko gusta da više ništa ne prima u sebe, niti propušta kroz sebe.

Nina Todorović pristupa arhitekturi putem intervencija kojim prostore menja i povezuje s drugim prostorima. Često koristeći transparentne printove gradskih motiva i postavljajući ih na prozore modernističke arhitekture ili kao montažne paravane unutar galerijskih prostora, Todorović ukazuje na preklapanje različitih arhitektonskih i urbanističkih nivoa u sadašnjoj arhitektonskoj realnosti u kojoj živimo. Todorović u svojim radovima time tematizuje arhitekturu i sećanja koja postoje o njoj, ali takođe tematizuje i izgradnju sećanja, ličnih, porodičnih, sećanja zajednica, generacija, u čemu arhitektura igra važnu ulogu.

Iz tog razloga, Nina Todorović putem umetničke prakse istražuje promenu urbanih pejzaža, pogotovo masovno rušenje porodičnih kuća u urbanim tkivima zarad izgradnje višespratnica. Kao i Neli Ružić, ona se time dotiče tržišne vrednosti i sticanja dobiti na račun nečega, u ovom slučaju na račun osećaja pripadnosti gradu i sećanja iz detinjstva, sećanja o porodici s kojom se živilo u porodičnoj kući, prava na zadržavanje svega onoga što je omogućavalo život sa članovima porodice. Rekonstruišući nestale vizure grada iz porodičnih sećanja, Todorović skreće pažnju na preplitanje sećanja individua sa sećanjima grada, na tragove nekadašnjih urušenih ili demoliranih kuća, poistovjećuje se prostor sećanja s fizičkim urbanim prostorom, arhivirajući tragove o njegovoj nekadašnjoj pojavnosti i životima koji su se odvijali u njemu.

Aleksandra Sojak-Borodo, koja se specijalizovala u domenu crteža, poslednjih nekoliko godina polje crteža proširuje na stvaranje stilizovanih maketa modernističkih zgrada izgrađenih u Poljskoj od pedesetih do osamdesetih godina prošlog veka. Crteže ili pretvara u ambijentalne instalacije preko celih zidova galerije ili stvara trodimenzionalne crteže, od kojih neke deca u okviru radionica koriste kao bojanke i koje posetioci nose kući. Zgrade iz gradova jedne države, nastale u određenom periodu istorije, time bivaju simbolično prenešene i distribuirane u drugim gradovima, u savremenom kontekstu. Izbijanjem pandemije covid-19 ova praksa medijalizacije arhitekture iz drugih država dobija novu težinu i značenje. Ona nam omogućava da vidimo grad iz druge države i to ne putem zgrada koje je turizam prepoznao kao najatraktivnije, nego putem masovne stanogradnje koja je u vremenu nastanka pružila krov nad glavom hiljadama radnika, a koja i danas čini veću uslugu stanovnicima nego istorijske i novoizgrađene korporativne građevine. Skriven između atraktivnih istorijskih zgrada i savremenih arhitektonskih tvorevina kapitalizma, socijalistički modernizam na koji se Sojak-Borodo fokusira egzistira na periferiji grada, ali u gradovima u koje doputuje putem njenih instalacija.

Prototipi

Repeticiju i umnožavanje jednog objekta koji ima svedene arhitektonske odlike koristi i Nikola Radosavljević stvarajući instalaciju koja se može sklopiti u knjigu i premestiti na drugo mesto poput šatora. Njegova knjiga šatora se time pojavljuje kao prototip novog produkta – nove knjige koja izrasta u umetničku instalaciju i u maketu arhitektonsko-urbanističko-društvenog koncepta. Odabiranjem vizuelnog znaka s jakim značajenskim nabojem – vojničkog šatora – Radosavljević nas navodi na razmišljanja o ratovima, istoriji, sadašnjosti, globalnim promenama i stvarima u prošlosti koje se ne mogu promeniti, ali koje se ne moraju ponoviti. Time što su mali i napravljeni od osetljivog materijala – papira – šatori Radosavljevića se vrlo lako mogu zgaziti, uništiti, čime se ukazuje na ranjivost života koji je simbolično prikazan njima. Po-ređani u stroge redove, oni podsećaju i na groblja mnogobrojnih poginulih vojnika, na postrojenja svih vojski širom sveta u ovom trenutku, ali i na vojničke krevete u kovid centrima koji se u bu-dućnosti mogu ponovo montirati i reaktivirati. Prema Entoniju Vidleru (Anthony Vidler), prostorne konture, granice i geografije pozvani su da zastupaju sva osporena područja identiteta, od nacionalnog do etničkog; prostorne šupljine i praznine zauzimaju tela koja internu repliciraju spoljne uslove političke i društvene borbe, tela za koja se pretpostavlja da zastupaju i identifikuju mesta takve borbe (Vidler, 1992: 167). Tematizujući život i kvalitet života utilitarnim objektom koji pruža sklonište, ali nema sve odlike arhitekture, Radosavljević stvara apstraktni kodeks, knjigu pravila, koja nas navodi da promislimo odgovornost koju imamo prema drugim ljudima, ali i koju drugi imaju prema nama.

Branislav Nikolić se elementima arhitekture okreće kao likovnim i značajenskim elementima i koristi ih da bi stvorio duhovite i ironične objekte koji ukazuju na absurdne pojave koje savremeno doba donosi. Kako nam komodifikacija i postfordizam nude bespregleđenu varijabilnost proizvoda koji su u principu isti, Nikolić uviđa da je isti slučaj i s nematerijalnim stvarima, pogotovo kada se sage-daju s istorijske distance. Iz tog razloga motiv fabrike, kuće i crkve, kao univerzalne metafore proizvodnje, zajednice i nematerijalnog, imaju važnu poziciju u njegovom stvaralaštvu. Koristeći distinktivne elemente ova tri entiteta – fabrike-kuće-crkve – Nikolić stvara objekte koji se pojavljuju kao prototipi, to jest koji imaju prividno upotrebnu funkciju.

Jedan od najnovijih radova Nikolića je objekat Convertible (2019), standardizovani objekat koji liči na sanduk za odlaganje stvari i koji menja svoj karakter u zavisnosti od toga kakva kula mu se dodaje. Kako kula može biti u obliku katedrale, džamije, fabrike ili neke druge građevine, ceo objekat promenom ovog jednog elementa/uloška menja svoju funkciju i simboliku u katedralu, džamiju ili fabriku, kao što se u istoriji često dešavalo da jedan arhitektonski objekat bude prenamenjen u različite funkcije. Okretanje ka arhitekturi, kao nosiocu značenja i simbolike, karakteriše i ranije Nikolićeve radove. Objekat Katedrala (2012) jeste mobilni radijator u obliku katedrale, umetnički objekat koji ima prividnu utilitarnu funkciju da greje kuću i ukućane, čime se pojavljuje kao prototip, to jest prvi upotrebnii proizvod izrađen po novom dizajnu na osnovu kojeg se dizajn odobrava ili nadograđuje za masovnu proizvodnju. Za razliku od Katedrale koja bi mogla zaživeti i u masovnoj proizvodnji, a ne samo u umetničkom diskursu, objekat Četiri vode (2016/2017) jeste oluk za nepostojeću kuću, to jest absurdni objekat koji ne može da preusmerava kišu jer nema krova s koga bi se ona slivala.

Ono što je važno za radove Nikolića jeste da većinu svojih objekata stvara kao upotrebljive objekte u punoj razmeri i to čini i kada su u pitanju objekti arhitektonskih razmara. Tako objekat Sekundarna arhitektura (2013, realizovan s Bobanom Mladenovićem) ima dimenzije i sve druge odlike upotrebine kuće koju stvaraju Romi reciklirajući nađene, odbačene materijale. Objekat Pozornica (2017) korišćen je kao pozornica za nastup u kvartovima o kojima se govorilo u okviru projekta Kada bi zgrade pričale, u okviru kojeg je i produciran. Objekat Ispovedaonica (2018) nastao je kao realna ispovedaonica koja je posle izlaganja u muzeju trebalo da bude privremeno postavljena u jednoj katedrali u Austriji. Sva ova tri objekta u punoj razmeri, Nikolić je stvarao od nađenih materijala (bačenih vrata, dasaka i druge stolarije) po uzoru na graditeljske prakse beskućnika kako bi ukazao na marginalizovan položaj Roma i migranata u svremenom društvu.

Toi-Toi ispovedaonica (2019), rad kojim se Nikolić predstavlja na izložbi Transformacije: savremena umetnost u/o arhitekturi, nadovezuje se na njegov prethodni rad Ispovedaonica i produbljuje dalje kako koncept tog rada, tako i metodu dizajniranja prototipa u savremenoj umetničkoj praksi. Kombinovanjem Toi-Toi wc-a i oblikovnih elemenata karakterističnih za arhitekturu katedrala, Nikolić stvara hibridni, ambivalentni objekat-prototip, to jest vizualizaciju tog objekta, koji funkcioniše na binarnim opozicijama trajno–privremeno, unikatno – masovno proizvedeno, sveto–utilitarno, duhovno pročišćenje – fizičko pročišćenje. Postavljanjem Toi-Toi ispovedaonice u javni prostor, Nikolić je čini široko dostupnom, na svim onim mestima gde se inače mogu postaviti i regularni Toi-Toi objekti. Ovaj rad, kao i prethodni Nikolićevi radovi, ukazuje kako savremena umetnost, u kombinaciji s produkt dizajnom i u kombinaciji s hibridnim funkcijama i značenjima arhitektonskih objekata, problematizuje komodifikaciju i masovnu proizvodnju oprosta, duhovnog, kulturološkog i svega onoga nematerijalnog što čini zajednice i pojedince onima što jesu.

Umesto zaključka

Sagledavanjem aspekata arhitekture kojima se savremeni umetnici okreću u okviru ove izložbe postavlja se niz pitanja: Da li su građanske inicijative te koje jedine mogu spasiti naslede od potpunog propadanja zarad privatnih interesa? Da li arhitektura na bilo koji način stvara bezizlazne situacije i prostore? Da li je metastaziranje urbanog tkiva nezaustavljivo i nekontrolišuće? Da li pojedinac zainista mora da prihvati sve uslove koju mu se ponude da bi mu se demolirala porodična kuća? Da li nas i u budućnosti neizbežno čekaju ratovi? Da li je najbolje što možemo da uradimo da naručimo Toi-Toi ispovedaonicu? Ako su odgovori na ova pitanja potvrđni, uvida se da je arhitektura u krizi i potrebljeno je preispitati kako da se to izmeni jer arhitektura i dalje ima moć da stvori uslove za nove forme društvenosti, a time i za novu budućnost umesto svih budućnosti koje su nam bespovratno ukradene zbog ratova, klimatskih promena, zagadenja planete, pandemija i drugih uzroka.

Mirijevo Untitled, serija crteža nadrealnih beogradskih pejzaža, naslanja se na prvobitno definisan okvir Ništa spec., projekta koji cilja da tematizuje i mapira savremeni grč kreiranjem bezizlaznih prostora sublimirajući tako svakodnevne pritiske i demobilisanost pojedinca prouzrokovana nemogućim životnim uslovima.

aquarelle, graphite, 80 x 110 cm, 2020

Mirijevo Untitled, a series of drawings of surreal Belgrade landscapes, relies on the originally defined framework of a nothing spec project that aims to thematize and map contemporary spasm by creating exit-less spaces, thus sublimating the daily pressures and demobilization of an individual caused by impossible living conditions.

BRANISLAV NIKOLIĆ

Rad Toi-Toi ispovedaonica je nadogradnja ideje od koje je 2018. godine u Rijeci nastala instalacija Ispovedaonica. Za tu instalaciju je prvobitnu ideju dao jedan sveštenik koji mi je predložio da izgradim ispovedaonicu od pronađenog materijala koja bi se (izvesno vreme) koristila u jednoj katedrali u Austriji. Izbor materijala od koga je Ispovedaonica izgrađena nedvosmisleno je ukazivao na marginalizovane društvene grupe (romsku i druge manjine, kao i izbeglice kojih danas u Evropu ima sve više) i na njihov drugorazredni položaj i ulogu u društvu. Postavljanjem te instalacije u zatvoreni javni prostor (crkvu, muzej) i njenim svakodnevnim korišćenjem, podsećamo se skoro zaboravljene stare izreke da smo pred bogom svi jednaki.

Toi-Toi ispovedaonica ide korak dalje. Time što je postavljena bilo gde u otvorenom javnom prostoru (kao i Toi-Toi), postaje još demokratičnija i otvorenija za korišćenje. Ona takođe može biti postavljena i na gradilištima, pa čak i gradilištima crkava, ukratko – na svim mestima gde je postavljen Toi-Toi. Napravljena od plastike, serijski, kao produkt dizajn, Toi-Toi ispovedaonica nadograđuje funkciju i trend Toi-Toi wc-a, pored fizičkog, omogućava i mentalno čišćenje u razgovoru s osobom koja sedi pored.

The concept of Toi-Toi confessional is an upgrade of the idea from which the installation Confessional was created in 2018 in Rijeka. The original idea for that installation was given by a priest, who suggested that I should build a confessional from found materials, a confessional that would be used (for some time) in a cathedral in Austria. The choice of materials for building unequivocally pointed to marginalized social groups (Roma and other minorities, as well as refugees, more and more of which are in Europe today) and to their second-class position and role in society. By placing that installation in a closed public space (church, museum) and by using it daily, we are reminded of the almost forgotten old saying that we are all equal before God.

The Toi-Toi confessional goes a step further. By being placed anywhere in an open public space (as well as Toi-Tois), it becomes even more democratic and open to use. It can also be placed on construction sites, and even church construction sites, in short – in all places where Toi-Tois are installed. Made of plastic, in mass serial production, as a product design, the Toi-Toi confessional upgrades the function and brand of the Toi-Toi toilets, and in addition to the physical, it also enables mental cleansing in conversation with the person sitting beside.

Soon, there will be no others

Ambijentalna instalacija, 100 objekata od papira, dimenzije promenljive, 2020.

Rad predstavlja vojnički puk u zamišljenom trenutku – noć pred bitku ili juriš u finalni rat. Sastavljen od objekata čije repetitivne forme grade stroge, oštре nizove, ovaj skup predstavlja režiranu scenu čija su osnova događaji koji su potresali globalnu scenu u poslednjih nekoliko godina, a lokalnu još od momenta mog rođenja – 1991. godine.

S ne tako velikim zadovoljstvom, u mislima se često vratim sceni gde smo se kao deca igrali rata, jer je bilo lakše da kroz igru uvežbamo kako se zaista vodi rat, i kako dete ubijeno u igri, može nastaviti da se i dalje maklja po livadi iza zgrade u kojoj smo živeli. Dete ubijeno u ratu ne može ustati, ni nastaviti da se bori za svoju zemlju.

Soon, there will be no others predstavlja poslednje skrovište niza državnih resursa od krvi i mesa noć pred apsolutnu likvidaciju. Uz potpunu svest da u svakoj bici zaraćene strane podnose žrtve, ovaj rad podseća na onaj mir pre stupanja na vatrenu liniju, u kome ima još svesti i razuma da se na liniju ujutru ne izade.

* Rad je deo kolekcije Jalovičke likovne kolonije, u okviru koje je nastao.

Soon, there will be no others

Ambient installation, 100 paper objects, variable dimensions, 2020

The work represents a military regiment at an imaginary moment, the night before a battle, or before the final war. Composed of objects whose repetitive forms build strict, sharp sequences, this set represents a directed scene based on the overall events that have shaken the global scene in the last few years, and the local one since my birth, in 1991.

With not so much pleasure, in my mind I often return to the scene where we played war as children, because it was easier to practice through the game how war is really fought, and how a child killed in the game can continue to wander around the meadow behind the building we lived in. A child killed in war cannot stand up or continue to fight for his country.

Soon, there will be no others, represents the last hiding place of a series of state resources in blood and flesh, the night before the absolute liquidation. With full awareness that both sides give their victims in every war, this work reminds us of the peace before entering the line of fire, in which there is still consciousness and reason not to go to the line in the morning.

* The work is part of the collection of the Jalovik Art Colony during which it was created.

Stolen Future

Video HD 1080p, stereo zvuk, 5'23", BD, 2014/2015.

Režija i montaža: Neli Ružić / originalna zvučna kompozicija: Rikardo Kortes / kamera: Ida Skoko, Darko Škrobočić / Osvetljenje: MediaRent Split

Jednokanalna video/audio instalacija Stolen Future nastala je kao rezultat intervencije u napuštenom objektu Motela Trogir, u Trogiru, 9. decembra 2014. godine. Motel Trogir (bivši Motel Sljeme, zatim Soline), izgrađen 1965. godine, po projektu arhitekte Ivana Vitića, krajem devedesetih je dvaput prodat, te je kao vredna parcela i građevina već dug niz godina predmet sudskog spora između nekoliko vlasnika, zbog čega lokalne vlasti ne vide mogućnost da ikako intervenišu. Intervencija Stolen Future realizovana je u okviru inicijative za trajnu zaštitu ovog primerka arhitekture socijalističkog modernizma, koju je pokrenuo projektni tim Motel Trogir / Udruga za suvremene umjetničke prakse Slobodne veze, koja je rezultirala time da je motel 2013. dobio status trajno zaštićene kulturne baštine Republike Hrvatske.

Intervencija Stolen Future istakla je devastirani motel kroz medij svetla. Osvetlila sam šest zapuštenih motelskih bungalova po kojima je Motel Trogir poznat. Gornja etaža svakog od njih bila je osvetljena različitom bojom, a svetlost u bungalovima naglasila je njihove karakteristične otvore, ujednačeni ritam identičnih kubičnih paviljona i skulpturalnu dimenziju Vitićeve modernističke arhitekture. Rezultat je video-rad koji beleži protok vremena: menjanje ambijentalnog svetla, od dnevnog do sutona i noći. Tako na videu od sirove dnevne slike devastiranih bungalova prelazimo u onu kontrastnu noćnu, koja kombinuje elemente svečanosti i propadanja.

Osvetljavajući paviljone iznutra, htela sam vratiti element utopije u kontekst entropije, gubitka energije. Gotovo oprečno od sadašnje situacije devastiranih prostora ovim radom sam htela stvoriti iluziju mogućeg, verziju B, alternativu apsurdnosti tranzicijske devastacije, muljaže, strategija propadanja. Stolen Future je bljesak nekog drugačijeg scenarija; nematerijalnost svetlosti priziva prošle budućnosti, ali i alternativne sadašnjosti.

Gradnja motela povezana je s izgradnjom Jadranske magistrale (otvoren je samo dan nakon nje) i deo je tadašnje utopističke vizije magistrale kao dugometražnog filma koji će se prikazivati putnicima na ekranu njihovog automobilskog stakla. Stolen Future pokušava naglasiti ovu kinematografsku dimenziju bungalova koji su vidljivi s Jadranske magistrale. Bila je potrebna podudarnost niza uslova za ostvarivanje intervencije Stolen Future: od dozvola za izvođenje u objektu na koji pretenduje više vlasnika u sporu, do samih klimatskih uslova. Pripreme za rad su bile dugotrajne zbog lokacije koja nema osnovne tehničke uslove, između ostalih, ni električnu energiju.

The single-channel video/audio installation Stolen Future is a result of an intervention in the abandoned "motel Trogir" in Trogir, Croatia, on December 9, 2014. Motel Trogir (former motel Sljeme, then Soline) was built in 1965 by prominent architect of the socialistic Yugoslavia, Ivan Vitić. In the late nineties, during the post socialistic transition, the motel was sold twice. There are several owners, the case is in the trial for many years and along with no maintenance it subsequently deteriorates. The Stolen Future intervention was realized within the initiative for permanent protection of this example of socialist modernist architecture, launched by the project team of Motel Trogir / Association for Contemporary Art Practices Loose associations, which resulted in the motel receiving the status of permanently protected cultural heritage of the Republic Croatia in 2013.

The Stolen Future intervention highlighted the devastated motel through the medium of light. I have chosen six motel pavilions for which the motel Trogir is well known: in order to draw the attention to the fate of abandoned modernist architecture, but also because I'm interested in process of entropy in relation to the spaces that are projecting a different future (utopia of modernism in relation to current state of devastation), and in particular the areas that have been invaded by the nature. The upper floor of each pavilion was illuminated in a different colour light emphasizing their characteristic vents, six identical cubic pavilions' unified rhythm and sculptural dimension of Vitić's modernist architecture. The result is a video work that records the passage of time: changing ambient light, from daylight to dusk and night. Thus, in the video, crude daily images of devastated pavilions are substituted by the contrast of night and lights that combine elements of ceremony and decay.

By illuminating the pavilions from within, I wanted to achieve the illusion of presence and ceremony, recalling the element of utopia in the context of entropy and degradation. Almost opposite of the current situation of the devastated area, with this intervention I tried to create an illusion of a possible, an alternative to the absurdity of transition "decay strategies" and fraud. Stolen Future is therefore, a flash of different scenarios; immateriality of light evokes the past futures and alternative presents.

The construction of the motel is connected with the construction of the Adriatic Highway (opened only a day after it), and is part of the then utopian vision of the Highway as a feature film that will be "shown to passengers on the screen of their car windows". Stolen Future tries to emphasize this cinematic dimension of the pavilions that are visible from the Adriatic Highway. It was necessary to match a number of conditions for the realization of the Stolen Future intervention: from the permits for working in the complex claimed by several owners in the dispute, to the weather conditions themselves. Preparations for the work were lengthy due to the location which does not have the basic technical conditions, among other things, no electricity.

Instalacija, blokovi dimenzija 15 x 18 x 4 cm, slobodno raspoređeni u prostoru, digitalna štampa, 2019.

Koncept mog rada je zasnovan na oduševljenju stambenim blokovima. To je pokušaj da se uvide vrednosti ponavljanja i ritmova koji su karakteristični za pejzaž većine gradova, posebno onih iz nekadašnjeg Istočnog bloka. Ovo divljenje, međutim, nije nekritično, množenjem i apstraktnim građenjem stvaram hibride koji mogu biti zabavni gledaocima, ali koji takođe mogu izazvati anksioznost. Modeli koji se koriste su stambeni blokovi inspirisani određenim zgradama u Torunu, gradu u Poljskoj, u kojem živim. Oni postaju neka vrsta suvenira iz grada koji je poznat po srednjovekovnom starom gradu i prelepim zgradama, ali nisu li blokovi jednako važan deo svakog grada? Važan, ali nevidljiv na svakodnevnom nivou.

Urban puzzle

Installation, multiple blocks of 15 x 18 x 4 cm, freely arranged in space, digital print, 2019

The concept of my work is based on the delight in the mass housing blocks. It is an attempt to see the values in repeatability and rhythms that are characteristic of the landscape of most cities, especially those of the former 'Eastern Bloc'. This admiration is not uncritical, however, through multiplication and abstract building I create hybrids that can be used to entertain the viewer, but which can also cause anxiety. The models used are blocks of flats inspired by specific buildings from Toruń, the city in Poland where I live. They become kinds of souvenirs from a city that is famous for its medieval old town and beautiful buildings, but aren't the blocks an equally important part of every city? Important, but invisible on a daily basis.

IVAN ŠULETIĆ

crteži, tuš i olovka na papiru, dimenzije promenljive, 2019/2020.

Ivan Šuletić je ideju grada kojom se bavi od 2015. godine definisao kroz koncept ne-mesta. To su, u ovom slučaju, urbani gradski prostori ispraznjeni od ikonografije prošlosti, tip arhitekture koji može biti lociran bilo gde na svetu, ali se na njemu ne mogu locirati i identifikovati ideje, tragovi i posledice pripadnosti određenoj kulturi. Ne-mesta je moguće pronaći bilo gde na planeti, jer nastaju širom sveta kao posledica kapitalističkog realizma, koji je prešao put od uverenja do estetike. S procesima globalizacije i brze fluktuacije kapitala formati novonastalih arhitektonskih objekata postaju jednolični obrasci. Ti obrasci se ogledaju u rasporedu i postavci modula na Šuletićevim crtežima; na njima su moduli postavljeni kao u ogledalu ili je njihovo ponavljanje (s razlikom) po površini papira nelinearno, rotaciono, cirkularno. Mreža kao način organizacije površine platna ili papira osnovna je potka modernističke slike koja izjavljuje odbojnost prema literarnom i narativnom, plošnost polja uređuje geometrizacijom proizvodeći antirealistička i antimimetička svojstva slike. Istovremeno, mreža dozvoljava tenziju između svih mogućih značenja koje motiv konotira a da pritom struktura neometano generiše antinarativne i čisto estetske kvalitete. Metod i smer repeticije u okviru čvrste mreže koja mapira površinu rada proizvodi perceptivni osećaj centrifugalnog ili centripetalnog kretanja na/u samoj slici ili crtežu. Šuletićeva umetnička praksa na ovom stupnju promišljanja predstavlja uvertiru u razvijanje problematike koja otvara mogućnost probijanja, proticanja i grupisanja različitih prostorno-vremenskih kategorija pomeranjem granica i dimenzija materijalnosti medija.

drawings, ink and pencil on paper, dimensions variable, 2019 / 2020

Ivan Šuletić has been dealing with the idea of the city since 2015 and he has defined that idea through the concept of non-place. These are, in this case, built urban spaces emptied of the iconography of the past, a type of architecture that can be located anywhere in the world but cannot be used to locate and identify ideas, traces and consequences of belonging to a particular culture. Non-places can be found anywhere on the planet, because they arise around the world as a consequence of the capitalist realism, which has crossed the path from belief to aesthetics. With the processes of globalization and the rapid fluctuation of capital, the formats of newly created architectural objects become uniform patterns. These patterns are reflected in the layout and the modules in Šuletić's drawings; the modules are placed on them as in a mirror, or their repetition (with a difference) on the surface of the paper is nonlinear, rotational, circular. The grid as a way of organizing the surface of canvas or paper is the basic weft of the modernist image that declares aversion to the literary and narrative, the flatness of the field is regulated by geometrization producing antirealistic and antimimetic properties of the image. At the same time, the network allows tension between all possible meanings that the motif connotes, while the structure generates uninterrupted and purely aesthetic qualities. The method and direction of repetition within a solid network that maps the work surface produces a perceptual sense of centrifugal or centripetal movement on/in the image or the drawing itself. Šuletić's artistic practice at this stage of reflection, is an overture to the development of issues that open the possibility of breaking through, flowing and grouping different spatial-temporal categories by moving the boundaries and dimensions of the materiality of the media.

Arhitektura sećanja

Umetnički projekat beleži lični odnos umetnice prema gradu i neposrednoj okolini u kojoj obitava, kao svedok svakodnevnih promena na urbanističkom i arhitektonskom planu, u datom istorijskom trenutku, ali i promena koje navedeni procesi ostavljaju na mentalnim mapama pojedinca i zajednice, sa specifičnim osvrtom na ličnu porodičnu istoriju i najranija sećanja. Osnovno polazište predstavlja kuća, koja se može shvatiti i kao obrazac svojevrsne topografije unutrašnjeg bića svake jedinke, a koja je zasluzna za sve buduće modele intimnosti koje čovek vremenom formira. Početak rada na projektu se poklapa s prvim vidljivijim tranzisionim promenama u arhitekturi grada. U pokušaju da se od zaborava sačuvaju otisci starih, već srušenih kuća, kroz foto-dokumentaristički pristup, dolazi se do obrade ličnog, emotivnog materijala, pohranjenog u porodičnim arhivama, koje bivaju iznete pred oči javnosti u vidu ambijentalne instalacije.

Projekat je realizovan kroz ilustraciju ličnog odnosa prema rodnoj kući, u kojem se ogleda i odnos prema gradu u celini, kao i prema pojedinačnom i kolektivnom sećanju i svim promenama kojima arhitektura i memorija podležu.

Mesto/objekat može da poseduje auru i ona se, kada dođe do njegovog fizičkog nestanka, preseljava i živi u našem sećanju.

* Fotografski zapisi korišćeni u ovom umetničkom projektu su autorski radovi Nine Todorović i dr Miroslava Todorovića, kao i deo foto/video arhive porodice Todorović.

Architecture of Memory

This art project makes a record of the artist's personal relationship with the city and immediate surroundings in which she resides, witnessing the daily changes in urban planning and architecture, at a given historical moment, and also the changes that these processes leave on the mental maps of the individual and the community, with specific emphasis on personal family history and the earliest childhood memories. The starting point is the house, which can be understood as a sort of pattern of specific inner topography of each individual, and which is responsible for all future models of intimacy that one forms during one's lifetime. The beginning of the project coincides with the first visible transitional changes in the city's architecture. In an attempt to preserve the imprints of the old, already destroyed dwellings from falling into oblivion, a photo-documentary approach leads to the processing of personal, emotional material stored in the family archives, which are presented to the public in the form of ambient installation.

The project was realized through the illustration of a personal relationship with the house of birth, which reflects the relation with the city in general as well as the relation with individual and collective memory, and with all the changes which architecture and memory succumb to.

The place/the object may have an aura, and this aura, when it comes to the place's/the object's physical disappearance, transfers and lives in our memories.

IMPLICIT (IN)ABILITIES OF ARCHITECTURE

The concept of the trialectics of space, which was introduced in 1974 by Henri Lefebvre, can serve as a basic starting point for understanding the works at the exhibition Transformations: Contemporary Art in/about Architecture. According to Lefebvre, space has an “active – operational or instrumental – role, like knowledge or action” (1991: 11) and is defined through the relationship between physical, mental and social space, that is, through the relationship between perceived, understood and experienced space (l'espace perçu – l'espace conçu – l'espace vécu). Space, therefore, greatly influences our social relations and our activities, which has already been confirmed by a number of historians and theoreticians of architecture who analyzed the role of architecture and urbanism in the processes of creating communities, abolishing segregation, making public space accessible to children and all the other forms of sociability which architecture can enable or disable.

Bearing in mind that architecture has the power to design social relations, this exhibition, on the one hand, presents contemporary artistic practices about architecture, that is, works that refer to architecture in order to problematize what it represents or symbolizes. On the other hand, the exhibition shows a selection of installations that were performed in situ, within the modernist architectural buildings. Both types of works, by changing space or symbolically moving one space into another, indicate the ways in which we use architecture, the ways in which we could use it, but also the ways in which it affects our activities and beliefs. As a result, art and architecture transform each other, but they also transform us.

Stagnation and mobility

We understand architecture primarily as something static, something that defines our movement and our activities. Architecture can also be viewed from a perspective of urbanism, that is, as constantly growing and changing mass due to proliferation of commercial content and multi-storey buildings in place of single-family houses. Architecture thus becomes a machine for profit, a machine for housing, a machine for learning, production, hospitalisation and everything else that is not determined only by locations (distance of the workplace from home, for example) but also by the quality of space which as such affects the quality of our life and work. Spaces without electricity, without heating, without sufficient water and sewage capacity, without good ventilation and enough light are not adequate for work, hospitalisation, learning, housing. The main purpose of architecture is therefore to provide good conditions and this goes beyond its aesthetic aspects. It even happens that a new kind of aesthetics in architecture is born from its functionality, as is the case with modernist socialism in architecture.

There is an abundance of inadequate buildings, in form of unmaintained ruins from the past, as well as in form of newly built buildings that are not adequately connected to the infrastructure or that are not cost-effective for maintenance (Kosec, 2013). One such ruin is a motel in Trogir designed in 1965 by the eminent Yugoslav and Croatian architect Ivan Vitić. Opened a day after the Adriatic Highway was put in function, the motel nowadays has over two decades of functional working behind it, and it has been for over three decades the target of “strategies of decay” – the strategic destruction of former societal property, factories, health and public funds, education, and thus the motel itself which is built on the land that in the meanwhile became attractive location for some new construction (Bodrožić and Šimpraga, 2014: 8). Recognizing the importance of this motel for the oeuvre of Ivan Vitić, but also for the history of the architecture of Yugoslav modernism, in 2013, a group of citizens launched an initiative which resulted in the motel being registered as immovable cultural property, being thus saved from complete demolition.

In order to change the perception of this motel as a ruin along the highway, without electricity and water, overgrown with vegetation, the civic initiative also sent an open call to artists to briefly change with their interventions the motel’s state of stagnation. As a response to this call, Neli Ružić created an intervention/video work Stolen Future. Its title alludes to the systematic destruction of the legacy of socialism and its memory, accompanied by enrichment of individuals at the expense of social welfare and therefore at the expense of the whole country whose future has been thus stolen. For Ružić’s light installation, which restores the former liveliness of the motel, the relationship between the seen, understood and experienced space, to which Lefebvre refers, is of special importance. The motel, now over half a century old, has moved from societal to private ownership, from ruin to cultural heritage, from an eerie location invisible to new generations to a sublime architectural frame that records the passage of time and invites us to collectively make plans for the future.

Motives of stagnation and space, as well as the ways in which we experience them, are of great importance for the works of Nadežda Kirčanski. Stepping out of the field of sculpture into an expanded field of installation and site-sensitive interventions, Kirćanski creates a series of installations in which she focuses on different types of stagnation and hopeless situations from which we cannot escape. In some works, she turns to cultural perception of death, by immersing towels in plaster and thus turning them into solid places/objects of memory, or by restoring displaced tombstones that became building material in road construction. In that context, architecture appears in her work as a significant semantic layer. In 2018, she began a series of installations titled nothing spec. by which she turned the Gallery of the Belgrade Youth Centre into a waiting room, using projections of a hospital ambience, painting the walls in a shade of green specific to hospitals, and bringing in benches and plants from a hospital waiting room. As part of the same project, she also transformed the Gallery of the Academy of Fine Arts in Saarbrücken (Hochschule der Bildenden Künste Saar) by placing floats to hang above the audience and thus seemingly turning the gallery into the water mass and placing the visitors under the water surface.

Kirćanski takes part in the exhibition Transformations: Contemporary Art in/about Architecture with a symbolic concept of a bus that has neither beginning nor end, a bus that is a closed circular structure, like a snake eating its own tail. This bus appears as a symbolic modification of public transport, becoming another sign of stagnation and hopeless situations, a symbol of impossible living conditions. Although the bus has doors, and you can get in and out of it, it doesn't lead anywhere, it just moves in a circle, like a carousel that is not bringing any fun this time. By choosing the motif of the bus, Kirćanski inevitably evokes all the difficulties of moving around any city that has buses as a form of public transport, all the problems caused by crowds, traffic accidents, sparse timetables, and, when it comes to our country, by gasoline deficiency during the embargo in the 1990s. By reducing the vehicle, created for the purpose of transporting passengers from point A to point B, to an absurd object that is deprived of its only function, the notion of space is also automatically denied, that is, the existence of the point A and the point B. Stagnation, that is, driving in a circle, as painful as tapping in a prison cell or as fun as a ride on a carousel, remains as the only reality.

Multiplication and erasure

Ivan Šuletić's contemporary artistic practice is characterized by the appropriation of architectural methods into artistic media. Thus, for the work Death to All (2014) he used tracing paper and redrawing technique – often used in architecture as it had been abundantly used for manual copying of administrative documents before the discovery of mechanical means of copying – in order to redraw the contours of the graffiti with that message from the football stadium, as he recognised that this graffiti was exposing the reality of our time. For the work Triumphal Arch (2014), he used the method of intersection from the presentation of architecture, and he made replica, a full-size model of the original arch, which he further cut just a bit above its base. In addition to using architectural methods, Šuletić also enters the architectural space with artistic interventions or uses it as a basic motif in his works. In 2012, he created a mural Golden Bars in Majdanpek, a city known for its gold mines, and in 2017 he began a series of paintings and drawings in which repetitive architectural motifs are the only theme and elements for creating artistic compositions.

One of these Cityscape series of drawings we can see at the Transformations: Contemporary Art in/about Architecture. In these drawings, architecture is not only a motif, but it also becomes a method because drawings take over some architectural drawing techniques. Presenting serially multiplied apartment blocks in order to emphasize the serial mass production of architecture, and the loss of its functionality in continuous accumulation, Šuletić points toward the uncontrolled metastasis of urban tissue that eats all the space there is. Such a cloned architecture, which, like a cell, multiplies by dividing in all directions, in all parts of the world, loses the quality that architecture should have and loses all those functions that enable its users to have various activities. As architecture is a kind of structure, a network that determines everything that can be inscribed in it – the most various forms of sociability, development and progress – it loses its function when it becomes too dense, as it cannot contain anything within itself.

Nina Todorović approaches architecture through interventions that change spaces and connect them with other spaces. Often using transparent prints of urban motifs and placing them on gallery windows or as movable screens within gallery spaces, Todorović points to the overlapping of different architectural and urban layers in the current architectural reality in which we live. In her works, Todorović thematizes architecture and the memories about it, but she also thematizes the construction of memories – those of a person, family, community and/or generation – and how architecture plays an important role for their construction and preservation.

For that reason, Nina Todorović is researching through her artistic practice the changes in urban landscapes, especially the mass demolition of family houses in urban tissues for the sake of building multi-storey buildings. Like Neli Ružić, she problematizes the market value and gaining profit at the expense of something, in this case, at the expense of a sense of belonging to the city and childhood memories that originated in family houses. Reconstructing the disappeared images of the city from family memories, Todorović draws attention to the intertwining of individuals' memories with the city's memories in the traces of collapsed or demolished houses. By identifying any family house as a place of memory, she is archiving traces of previous city's appearances and lives within it.

Aleksandra Sojak-Borodo has been expanding the field of drawing in the last few years to create stylized models of modernist blocks built in Poland from the 1950s to the 1980s. She either turns the drawings into installations over the entire gallery walls or creates objects-drawings, some of which the children use as colouring books within workshops, or visitors take home with them. Buildings from the cities of one country, created in a certain period of history, are in this way symbolically transferred and "distributed" in other cities, in a contemporary surrounding. With the outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic, this practice of mediating architecture from other countries gains new weight and significance. It allows us to see a far away city, not through buildings that tourism has recognized as the most attractive, but through mass housing, which at the time of its creation provided a roof over the heads of thousands of workers, and which still does more service to residents than historic and newly built corporate buildings. Hidden between attractive historical heritage and contemporary architectural creations of capitalism, the socialist modernism that Sojak-Borodo focuses on exists on the peripheries of the Polish city, but also in the cities to which it "arrives" through her installations.

Prototypes

Nikola Radosavljević also uses the methods of reproducing and repeating an object that has reduced architectural features, but he creates an installation that can be folded into a book and moved to another place like a tent. His book of tents appears as a new book that expands into an art installation and serves as a model of an architectural-urban-social concept. By choosing a visual sign with strong semantic connotations – a military tent – Radosavljević leads us to think about wars, history, the present global changes and things in the past that cannot be changed, but which do not have to be repeated. Since the tents are very small and made of sensitive material – paper – they can be very easily trampled, destroyed, which points to the vulnerability of life that is symbolically shown by them. Arranged in strict lines, they are reminiscent of the cemeteries of many fallen soldiers, of various armies around the world at the moment, but also of the military beds in COVID centres that can be reassembled and reactivated any day now. According to Anthony Vidler, "contours, boundaries, and geographies [of space] are called upon to stand in for all the contested realms of identity, from the national to the ethnic; its hollows and voids are occupied by bodies that replicate internally the external conditions of political and social struggle, and are likewise assumed to stand for, and identify, the sites of such struggle" (1992: 167). By thematizing life and quality of life with a utilitarian object that provides shelter, but does not have all the features of architecture, Radosavljević creates an abstract codex, a book of rules, which leads us to think about the responsibility we have towards other people, but also the responsibility others have towards us.

Branislav Nikolić uses elements of architecture as artistic and semantic elements in order to create humorous and ironic objects that emphasize absurdity of modern times. As commodification and post-Fordism offer us endless variability of products that are in fact all the same, Nikolić realizes that this is also the case with intangible things, especially when viewed from a historical distance. For that reason, the motif of the factory, house and church, as universal metaphors of production, community and the spiritual, have an important position in his work. Using the distinctive elements of these three entities – factory-house-church – Nikolić creates objects that appear as prototypes, that is, that have a seemingly utilitarian function.

One of Nikolić's latest works is Convertible (2019), a standardized object that looks like a storage box and that changes its character depending on what kind of tower is added to it. As a tower can be in the form of a cathedral, mosque, factory, or some other building, the whole object changes its function and symbolism into a cathedral, mosque or factory by changing this one element, as it has often happened in history that an architectural object had been repurposed into different functions. The use of architecture, as the bearer of meaning and symbolism, characterizes Nikolić's earlier works as well. The Cathedral (2012) is a mobile radiator in the shape of a cathedral, an art object that has the apparent utilitarian function to warm the house, thus appearing as a prototype, i.e. the first usable product made according to a new design on the grounds of which the design is approved for mass production, or not. Unlike the Cathedral, which could become a product through mass production, and not only remain within the artistic discourse, the Four Waters (2016/2017) is a gutter for a non-existent house, an absurd structure that cannot divert rain because there is no roof from which it would pour into it.

What is important for Nikolić's work is that he creates most of his objects as usable and in full scale, even when it comes to objects of architectural dimensions. Thus, the work Secondary Architecture (2013, created with Boban Mladenović) has dimensions and all other features of a usable house created by Roma communities through recycling found, discarded materials. The Stage (2017) was used as an actual stage for performances in front of the buildings that were in focus of the project "If buildings could talk," within which it was produced. The Confessional (2018) was created as a real confessional, which, after being exhibited in the museum, was to be temporarily set up in a cathedral in Austria. Nikolić created all three of these objects in full size from found materials (thrown doors, boards and other carpentry) based on the construction practices of the homeless in order to point out the marginalized position of Roma and migrants in today's society.

Toi-Toi Confessional (2019), exhibited at the Transformations: Contemporary Art in/about Architecture, builds on his previous work Confessional and further deepens both the concept of that work and the method of designing prototypes in contemporary art. By combining Toi-Toi toilets and design elements characteristic of cathedral architecture, Nikolić creates a hybrid, ambivalent "prototype," that is, a visualization of that object, which functions on binary oppositions permanently-temporarily, uniquely-mass-produced, sacred-utilitarian, spiritual purification-physical purification. By setting up a Toi-Toi Confessional in a public space, Nikolić makes it widely available, in all those places where regular Toi-Toi facilities can be set up. This work, like Nikolić's previous works, indicates that contemporary art, combined with product design and with hybrid functions and meanings of architectural objects, problematizes the commodification and mass production of forgiveness, spirituality, culture and all those immaterial things that make communities and individuals what they are.

Instead of a conclusion

The aspects of architecture on which the contemporary artists focus within this exhibition, raise several questions: Are civic initiatives the only ones who can save the heritage from complete destruction for the sake of private interests? Does architecture in any way create hopeless situations and in-trapping spaces? Is the metastasis of urban tissue unstoppable and uncontrollable? Do individuals really have to accept all the conditions offered to them for demolishing their family houses? Are wars inevitably waiting for us in the future? Is the best choice we have ordering a Toi-Toi Confessional? If the answers to these questions are "yes", then the architecture is in crisis and it is necessary to reconsider how to change it because architecture still has the power to create conditions for new forms of sociability, and thus for a new future instead of all futures that have been irretrievably stolen from us due to wars, climate change, ecological pollution, pandemics and other causes.

BIOGRAFIJE / BIOGRAPHIES

Nadežda Kirćanski (1992, Zrenjanin), vizuelna umetnica. Osnovne i master studije završila je 2017. godine na Fakultetu likovnih umetnosti, Odsek vajarstvo. Trenutno je na doktorskim umetničkim studijama na istom fakultetu. Njena umetnička praksa angažuje širok raspon medija uključujući crtež, objekte i site-sensitive prostorne instalacije. Jedan od ključnih fokusa u njenom radu je sudar socio-političkih realnosti i savremenog jezika mlađih, čijom se analizom filtrira skriveni emotivni, fizički i intelektualni rad. Realizovala je četiri samostalne izložbe: 2019 – Višak značenja, Galerija Haos; O čemu razmišljaš, s Dragonom Novakovićem, Navigator Art Gallery; 2018 – Ništa spec 1.0, Galerija DOB-a; #RIP, Remont, Beograd. Od 2016. godine izlagala je na više grupnih izložbi u zemlji i inostranstvu. U novembru 2019. bila je angažovana kao kustos i organizator projekta Hybridni narativi, hibridne istorije, u saradnji s HEKLER platformmom iz Njujorka. Projekat u okviru programa Nagrade Mangelos obuhvatao je jednomesecni rezidencijalni boravak za dve umetnice iz Njujorka i Kejptauna, a zatim i izložbu u Umetničkom prostoru U10, kao i u Savremenoj galeriji Zrenjanin. Član je Umetničkog saveta Galerije ALUZ-a (Asocijacija likovnih umetnika Zrenjanina), kao i Umetničkog saveta Galerije SKC-a Kragujevac. U proteklih godinu dana učestvovala je na nekoliko umetničkih rezidencija: Kulturvermittlung Steiermark, Grac; Residency Unlimited, Njujork; Temporary Studio Saar, Sarbriken; 42. Jalovička likovna kolonija; Art otok Švicarska, Ljubljana; 39. Susret akvarelista, Ečka. Dobitnica je Nagrade Dimitrije Bašičević Mangelos za mlade savremene umetnike, kao i pohvale u okviru Nagrade za crtež Fondacije Vladimira Veličkovića za 2018. godinu. Takođe, dobitnica je Nagrade Sreten Stojanović, profesor ALU, Fakulteta likovnih umetnosti za dostignuća u skulpturi 2017. godine. Njeni radovi deo su Wiener Art kolekcije, kao i drugih privatnih kolekcija. Trenutno radi u ateljeju Nove galerije vizuelnih umetnosti u Beogradu, gde priprema samostalnu izložbu.

Nadežda Kirćanski (1992, Zrenjanin), visual artist. She completed her undergraduate and master studies in 2017 at the Faculty of Fine Arts in Belgrade, Department of Sculpture. She is currently studying for a doctorate in art at the same faculty. Her artistic practice engages a wide range of media including drawing, objects and site-sensitive spatial installations. One of the key focuses in her work is the collision of socio-political realities and the modern language of young people, whose analysis filters out hidden emotional, physical and intellectual work. She has realized four solo exhibitions: 2019 – Redundancy, Haos Gallery; What are you thinking about, with Dragan Novaković, Navigator Art Gallery; 2018 – nothing spec 1.0, DOB Gallery; #RIP, Remont, Belgrade. Since 2016, she has been exhibiting at a number of group exhibitions in the country and abroad. In November 2019, she was hired as a curator and organizer of the Hybrid Narratives, Hybrid History project in collaboration with the HEKLER platform from New York. The project, which was implemented within the Mangelos Award program, included a one-month residency for two artists from New York and Cape Town, and then an exhibition at the U10 Art Space, as well as at the Contemporary Gallery Zrenjanin. She is a member of the artistic council of the ALUZ Gallery (Association of Fine Artists of Zrenjanin) as well as of the artistic council of the SKC Kragujevac Gallery. In the past year, she has participated in several art residencies: Kulturvermittlung Steiermark, Graz; Residency Unlimited, New York; Temporary studio Saar, Saarbrücken; 42nd Jalovik Art Colony; Art Island Switzerland, Ljubljana; 39th Meeting of Aquarellists, Ečka. She is the winner of the Dimitrije Bašičević Mangelos Award for young contemporary artists, as well as the Vladimir Veličković Foundation Drawing Award in 2018. She is also the winner of the Sreten Stojanović Award, professor at the ALU Faculty of Fine Arts for achievements in sculpture in 2017. Her works are part of the Wiener Art collection, as well as other private collections. She is currently working in the studio of the New Gallery of Visual Arts in Belgrade, where she is preparing a solo exhibition.
